THE CLEANER

A small boy boarded a surface car last night with three bunches of roses which he offered at 10 cents a bunch. Hardly had the words left his lips when he was assailed from four sides at once. The flowers were snatched from his hands, coins were thrust at him and two men almost came to blows in their eagerness to secure the roses. When the excitement subsided, the boy looked at the money, glanced around the car, muttered · Hully Gee" and got off, while a woman who had unsuccessfully tried to purchase one bunch glared at the fortunate possessore with envy. . . .
